Mobile and Mildred Streets

“Good streets foster a type of attention that allows a sense of place and human connection to happen”

“Good street form accommodates a range of mistakes and inattention. Good streets do not demand an inhuman level of attention in order to stay alive, and the consequences for breaking a rule are low. One mistake should not mean disaster. On a good street, because your attention is not exhausted by rules, you have the bandwidth to enjoy the experience of being on the street.”

Note: Do not consider the height of the buildings in these images, please just consider the concept
